WELCOME TO

Closet BOOT CAMP

Let's face it: Your closets hold a ton. Perhaps a ton too much. It's time to rein in the excess—from last season's stilettos and the kiddos' soccer gear to barely used guest towels and Grandma's fine china—and bring order to the chaos

BY KARI MOLVAR REPORTED BY EMILY HSIEH ILLUSTRATED BY LAURA LJUNGKVIST

GET REAL

A place for everything and everything in its place? Might as well make this your mantra for organizing the pantry. Style and efficiency expert Jeffrey Phillip recommends creating a road map with labels so everyone in the house knows where things go. Also key? Removing expired goods regularly. "Daylight saving time is a good benchmark for when to take stock," he says.

1 DECANT STAPLES
Avoid a hodgepodge of variously shaped grocery-store packages by transferring snacks, cereals, and pasta into clear seal-top containers. They stack easily, and food will stay fresh longer. Steel Pop containers, Oxo, $17-$23; oxo.com.

2 SORT YOUR SPICES
Overcrowding? Major pantry fail. Use vertically tiered racks to keep all the containers in plain sight. Metropolitan Rack, Dean & DeLuca, $75; deandeluca.com.

3 PUT A LABEL ON IT
Edge each shelf in colorful write-on tape so you can note what belongs in every space. Washi tape, MT, $4 each; mt-tape.us.

4 PULL OUT POTS
Maximize your storage for pots, pans, and mixing bowls with portable drawers, and stow lids in long, horizontal organizers. 20" pull-out cabinet organizer, Simplehuman, $59; containerstore.com.

5 WEIGH OPTIONS
Place heaviest items (crates, pet food, vino) below deck. Get a wine rack that keeps labels visible so you can grab that Sancerre tout de suite. Trifecta rack, Oenophilia, $35; amazon.com.

BONUS TIP! CHALK IT UP
Use chalkboard paint on the inside of the pantry door, then jot down what you need as soon as it runs out. Snap a smartphone pic of the list before heading to the store. Chalkboard paint in Charcoal, RH Baby & Child, $18/quart; rhhbabyandchild.com.

THE CLOSET WHISPERERS

Hiring a designer to redo your closet might be a stretch, but you can make your budget go far with Organized Living's new Select Your Own tool. Choose the type of closet you want to tackle and enter its measurements. The site then generates several predesigned spaces, complete with products that would fit your framework and suit your needs. Once you pick your favorite, you can purchase the recommended items individually or opt to snag the whole shebang in one sweep (packages start at $117; organizedliving.com).

Sofa

Piero Lissoni's sofa is a well-executed combination of clean lines and traditional shapes. Its wide seat and classic details make it a masterpiece of design and comfort.

Wall panels & door

This collection of wooden panelling and paneled doors by US architect Robert AM Stern for Italian brand Lualdi features unconventional proportions.

Side table

Belgian designer Michael Verheyden's elegant side table consists of bronze legs and a locally sourced marble top; its size and height can be customised.

Floor

Fourth generation carpet expert Ben Soleimani knows how to make a modern rug the classic way. His hand-knotted 'Quadro' design combines enchanting geometry with pure craftsmanship.

Cabinet

This low cabinet by Antonio Citterio is an exercise in discretion. The mahogany piece is balanced on aluminum legs and conceals three wide drawers within.

TRADITIONAL

Most older houses are painted in a muted palette. “Planters are an easy and permanent way to bring life and color to a traditional home,” says Kevin. Plus, they offer year-round delights: Depending on the season, you can plant flowers, shrubs, or small trees in them.

Sharp and Sophisticated

Nothing's more classic than a white house with a black door. Paint (door), in 25-17 Black, prattandlamert.com. Paint (house), in 967 Cloud White, benjaminmoore.com. Paint (accent), by Behr, in 490D-6 Thermal Spring, homedepot.com.

Well Rounded

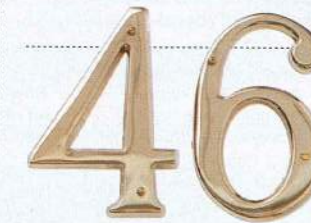

“This brass knocker lends instant formality,” says Lorna. Classic ring door knocker, $85, rejuvenation.com.

Turn Style

If you want to highlight a metal, choose a lockset with a plate. Doorknob (#11433), in Polished Brass, omniindustries.com.

This strip of brass is striking against a black door.

Touch of Class

“The metals you choose should all be the same color,” says Kevin. Estate-style house numbers, in Polished Brass, $20 each, baldwinhardware.com.

Pendant Jewelry

The blue on the interior adds a subtle hit of color. Hamilton light fixture, by Michael Amato, in Hewn Brass, urbanelectricco.com.

Growing Trend

This Versailles planter was inspired by the ones used in Louis XIV's Orangerie. In Jade, from $495, frontgate.com.

MODERN

“Don't underestimate the impact of the slightest design gesture,” says Kevin—particularly when it comes to modern homes, which tend to have clean lines that highlight every detail. For example, spend time choosing the house numbers: “It's amazing how they can transform a house.”

Bold and Beautiful

“The pop of red feels very ‘modern art’ to me,” says Kevin. Paint (door), in Dix Blue No. 82, us.farrow-ball.com. Paint (house), in SW7018 Dovetail, sherwinwilliams.com. Paint (accent), in 1323 Currant Red, benjaminmoore.com.

A nickel finish suits modern spaces.

A Cool Grip

This set is forged and polished by hand. Atlanta entrance trim, in Polished Nickel, $550, baldwinhardware.com.

Stick Figures

A modern home calls for sleek lines. Elevated nickel numbers, 5", $6 each, homedepot.com.

Angle of Repose

Made of recycled plastic, this chair is a clever update on a classic design. Adirondack chair, in Red, $450, dwr.com.

Light Box

The translucent glass gives off a soft light. Union Filament milk-glass narrow sconce, in Polished Nickel, $259, restorationhardware.com.

Sole Mate

“A great alternative or supplement to a doormat,” says Lorna. Wooden foot scraper, $145, rejuvenation.com.

RESTORATION HARDWARE

Last year the California-based retailer opened a mammoth prototype store near Buckhead

Atlanta. Its six stories, connected by curved double staircases, feature a Ben Soleimani Rugs showroom, an interior design center, furnishings for "small spaces," and RH Baby & Child. Twelve-foot glass doors open onto Juliet balconies and terraces, and an 8,000-square-foot rooftop "conservatory" crowns the megamansion. • 3030 Peachtree Road, 770-804-9040, restorationhardware.com

Lightweight matchstick blinds bring texture and privacy to a bathroom while allowing some light to filter in. Kennedy roman shade. At Rona.

> To add visual interest, hang a statement mirror in front of a window. Dutch Baroque mirror in Black. At RH Restoration Hardware.

THE INSPIRATION
 Suspended from chains installed in the window frame, the hanging mirror frees up the vanity's counter, and its tall, slender shape enhances the height of the window.

Q We're adding a bathroom to our older home, and the best place for the sink seems to be in front of a large window. Is that okay to do? If so, how can I make this work?
 — E.P., via email

A You'll see in the Inspiration room that it's possible to place a sink in front of a window and have it look fantastic. In this bathroom of a guest room in the same Southampton, N.Y., house, the plumbing is coming from the floor. If that's the situation in your bathroom, take into consideration the look of the pipes. Here, they're nickel-plated to match the faucets for a handsome, uniform look. And don't hide the fact that it's in front of a window. This open base keeps the window unblocked, letting in plenty of natural light, as does hanging the mirror directly from the window casing from bronze chains. The mirror is centred within the window frame and about 8" above the sink so it doesn't crowd the counter and lets in plenty of light in between.

If privacy is an issue, matchstick blinds are a great option: they provide screening, but are light and casual.

Lighten Up!

Drippy, dreary winter? Time to brighten the house with ideas both practical and fanciful.

1. A little glitter never hurt! "Fold" pillows from John Robshaw Textiles, embroidered with metallic thread, are $125 to $175 (pillow inserts separate) from johnrobshaw.com.
 2. Daylight plus privacy? Top-down/bottom-up shades, from companies like Hunter Douglas and Next Day Blinds, deliver. And designer Tricia Huntley says having your windows professionally cleaned makes a miraculous difference.
 3. Brighten that dark corner with a long, narrow mirror, such as the Ming mirror, $620 at area Mitchell Gold + Bob Williams stores and mgbwhome.com.
 4. Tiling the interior surround of a window with mirror — or these mirror-finish porcelain tiles from Ann Sacks (annsacks.com) — allows more light to reflect into the room.
 5. Glittery Nest Birchwood Pine and Holiday candles double their glow when set atop a mirror: $34 each at area Neiman Marcus stores and neimanmarcus.com.
 6. The fireplace: not so good for heating but great for atmosphere. Potpourri fire-starters from the 400-year-old pharmacy Santa Maria Novella (5454 Wisconsin Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.; 240-743-4949; santamarienovella.com) make for quick combustion when set under logs, four for $55.
 7. Restoration Hardware's Starlit Trees lit up the holidays, but Dupont Circle designer Joseph Ireland says he leaves his 3-footer in place "for months." Hard to argue! The trees are $32.99 to $249.99 at restorationhardware.com.

Princess Bedrooms That Rule

Princesses have long enchanted little girls. But cultural flash points in recent years have fueled demand for increasingly elaborate—and expensive—fantasy rooms.

Getting the princess look is getting easier as more retailers roll out regal items. Pottery Barn Kids has “seen a growing trend in over-the-top dream rooms,” said Kim Terry, a spokeswoman for the San Francisco-based company. The company introduced tufted headboards and tulle canopies two years ago, unicorn bedding last year, and this year has expanded these categories as well as the number of “sparkly chandeliers,” Ms. Terry said. RH Baby & Child, a division of Corte Madera-Calif.-based Restoration Hardware, currently offers gilt, crown-shaped canopy hardware; ornate armoires;

crystal pendant-style chandeliers and a $1,300 girl’s bed described as “an exacting replica of a late 19th-century Rococo bed from France.”

Sure, the medium-purple wall colour isn't in style anymore, nor is the black-edged floral print rug, but nearly everything in this apartment has stood the test of time and looks great. For instance, the coffee table. It's a large square shape in a rustic natural finish with sculpted legs, and it fits in perfectly in this casual space. Restoration Hardware offers a similar version called the Balustrade Salvaged Wood coffee table, from $1,595 USD. Although not a replica, the Clara chair from Crate and Barrel provides similar proportions, as does the Dhurrie chair from Anthropologie.

HUFF POST ENTERTAINMENT

Let's Face It, Without Controversy, The Grammys -- and Probably The Music Business -- Would Be Done

No doubt about it. The Grammys are in trouble. Aside from an occasional moment of actual artistry here and there - like Annie Lennox's recent performance - over the past decade, the barely credible awards show that celebrates, what it claims, are music's best and brightest, has made it its mission to hype the same overly-processed/produced artists, singing the same overly-produced songs, and saying the same ridiculous things. If that's not enough proof the show's relevance is in a downward spiral, just look at the numbers.

Last Sunday's telecast of the annual awards show netted its lowest ratings in over six years, combined with a 10% drop in viewers in the all-important 18-49 demographic.

This shouldn't really come as a surprise to anyone, except for maybe Kanye West, who happens to be one of the few interesting artists left in the decaying corpse that is today's music business.

And, God bless him. Without Kanye dissing Beck, without Chris Brown and Rhianna throwing down, without some dork crashing a Bob Dylan performance, without J-Lo showing up half-naked, who would care about an awards show for an entire industry that only promotes about 11 artists a year?

Simply Google "Kanye Beck Grammys" and you'll be able to peruse over 44 million posts. If that's not a great way to stay relevant these days, I don't know what is. But, obviously, it has nothing to do with music.

Yes, kids, this is what it looks like when the prophecy "Pop will eat itself" actually comes true. But, it's not just The Grammys that are in trouble, it's the entire music business.

This, also, should be no surprise to anyone over the age of 15, but even though we're well-entrenched in the iTunes generation, it's still pretty alarming to see a mega-successful artist like Meghan Trainor claim she's broke.

February 13, 2015

You couldn't go anywhere in the past year without hearing "All About That Bass," yet, in a recent interview, the outspoken Miss Trainor says she's hardly seen any returns. Nonetheless, the record industry keeps churning along blindly, handing out awards for "Best This" and "Best That", which is all well and good, but when no one knows what a record is anymore, what does it really mean?

For the lucky 5 or 6 artists that make it through the machine, it means a phone call from Clive Davis, or one of the other two remaining moguls, but, as the facts clearly show, this type of business model - if you can call it that - is akin to the dinosaurs eating everything they see while doing nothing to replenish the soil. We all know what happened to them.

Today's music buyer has an attention span of about five minutes. He/she downloads one or two songs by an artist and moves on, making it all but impossible for most artists or groups to build their brand. The other end of the process - the actual writing of a song - is just as constricted.

A friend of mine is a mega-successful songwriter/producer. He's written for the likes of Britney, J Lo, and many others and made millions from publishing. However, in the past 4-5 years, he's found it almost impossible to get anyone to work with him. This is due, in no small part, to the handful of mega-artists - who make up a huge chunk of what's left of music sales - circling the wagons and only working with the one or two writers/producers they know from way back when, leaving a lot of talented writers - even in the cheesy top 40 category - watching from the sidelines.

One of my Facebook friends posted a great quote the other day that sums up this whole mess quite nicely: "It took 68 people to make Beyonce's album. Beck did it all by himself."

Foo Fighter's mega-talented front-man Dave Grohl's recent Facebook post talking about how kids these days think that the way to become a musician is to wait on line with a thousand kids, go on television and sing a song for a few ego-maniacal judges, and, voila!, you've got yourself a career, is another good illustration of what the industry - and the art - has become. However, Dave misses one important distinction: Standing on line and singing for judges on T.V. is not how you become a musician, it's how you become a pop star, and, even more so today, they're two very different things.

It's easy to put the blame for the shambles the music industry as a whole currently finds itself in on the shoulders of the greedy corporate executives from years past. But, another major factor of the collapse of this once unstoppable machine that cannot be ignored has to be former president Clinton's signing of the Telecommunications Act of 1996.

This one action instantly removed all restrictions of media ownership - restrictions that would've provided the nation's treasury with an additional $70 billion in license fees - and allowed corporations like Clear Channel to gobble up as many television and radio stations, concert venues, promotion companies, media outlets, and ticket vendors it could get its greedy hands on. This move, accompanied by the simple trick of the same ownership using different names like Live Nation - to make it appear as if they are different entities, was/is arguably the single-greatest reason the music industry has lost 99% of its diversity.

Even a monkey could tell you allowing one or two giants to monopolize an entire industry, be it music, movies or even long distance telephone calls, all but stifles any hope of organic creativity and competition, yet, apparently our congressmen and women felt otherwise. What else is new? Sure, once in a while something slips through the pipes, but that's about as rare as an escape from Alcatraz.

So, how do we make things better? Obviously, there's no easy answer. But, seeing as how the days of "artist development" are pretty much gone forever, it's good to see nationally recognizable brands, like Restoration Hardware - a company that, in your wildest dreams, you'd never associate with music - stepping up and using its resources to help launch the careers of independent artists.

I guess the best we, and they, can hope for at this point is that, perhaps, along with the surprise of Gerardo winning Album of the Year, the 2016 Grammys will feature a few more real "musicians" in between the dance numbers. If not, there's always the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. Now, there's a group who know what they're doing.

The Nursery

February 13, 2015

For the first months and years, the nursery is a place that you and your baby will be spending a lot of time. So it makes sense to create a beautiful space for you both to enjoy together. Designing and furnishing your nursery is a fantastic opportunity to let your creative side take over. A soothing neutral color palette of soft grays, creams or ivory provides the perfect starting point, allowing you to dress the room with beautiful furnishings, accessories and the perfect finishing touches in your chosen accent colors. These can then be easily updated as your child grows.
