...CONTINUED

On a recent holiday on an exotic island, I was strolling through an immaculately curated home admiring every dazzling detail when I was informed every perfect piece was all from RH. In case you didn't notice, it is an RH world and we are just living in it. Or at least we want to be living in

it. Much to the delight of its fervent fans, the luxury brand is expanding its impressive empire again with its most monumental product launch to date, RH Contemporary (rhcontemporary.com).

"RH Contemporary represents the latest evolution of the RH brand as we continue to build a platform for the most forward-thinking people in our industry," says Gary Friedman, RH chairman and CEO. "Through these collaborative partnerships, and our own authentic lens, we are proud to introduce one of the largest fully integrated collections of luxury contemporary furnishings in the world."

The collection debuted with an immersive experience at RH San Francisco, the Gallery at The Historic Bethlehem Steel Building, followed by displays at RH New York, RH Chicago, RH Los Angeles and RH West Palm Beach—and in a dedicated 320-page Source Book and website, of course.

showcases an elevated level of quality previously not available outside-to-the-trade showrooms. Think made-in-Italy upholstery in luxurious fabrics by Holland & Sherry, Italian travertine and burl veneers. Organic textures and sandy palettes mix with warm hues of cream, camel, burnt caramel and bronze.

And no RH launch would be complete without its signature star power. Celebrated for its creative collaborations with the top designers in the world, RH Contemporary brings some new talent to its platform including New York-based star Ryan Korban and acclaimed French designer Joris Poggioli. The lighting is by luminaries like Jonathan Browning,
