

Insider's Guide To Paris Autumn 2025: Top Restaurants, New Boutique Hotels And Must-See Exhibitions

This autumn, Paris delivers an appealing mix of culture and style, with major art openings, new design-focused hotels and a dining scene that never disappoints.

There's never a bad time to visit the city of light, the world's most visited capital but this autumn seems particularly attractive, thanks to the blockbuster exhibitions, new restaurants and hotels.

Le Jardin at RH PARIS
RH PARIS

The incredible lobster roll at RH's chic, seafood dominated Le Jardin is alone worth a visit. The restaurant, located on the second floor terrace, under a spectacular curved glass and steel structure inspired by the Grand Palais is one of three food and beverage offerings in American luxury interiors company RH, previously called Restoration Hardware. The billion-dollar lifestyle brand has just opened its inaugural European flagship on the Avenue des Champs-Élysées, featuring an impressive seven-story gallery spanning 3,900 square meters. Visitors might remember the address for Abercrombie & Fitch but the building underwent a major transformation led by architects Foster + Partners. If you don't dine at Le Jardin, Le Petit is a lovely roof garden terrace restaurant on the seventh floor with great views of the Eiffel Tower, Grand Palais and the Louvre, or for drinks, sink into one of their legendary sofas and enjoy a glass of champagne or cocktail in The World of RH Bar.
