RH has opened its most ambitious European gallery in the heart of London's Mayfair, transforming a historic Palladian mansion into a five-storey destination.

RH London, The Gallery in Mayfair brings luxury interiors, architecture, and hospitality together in one remarkable destination.

Luxury furniture showrooms are increasingly becoming destinations rather than simply places to shop, but RH has taken the concept to an entirely new level with the opening of RH London, The Gallery in Mayfair.

Occupying an extraordinary collection of restored heritage buildings centred around an 18th-century Palladian mansion at Burlington Gardens, the new gallery blurs the boundaries between retail, architecture, hospitality, and culture.

The elegant Tea Bar sits alongside a grand staircase beneath a striking gold leaf ceiling.

A LANDMARK REIMAGINED

The five-storey gallery has transformed one of Mayfair's most historic addresses into RH's largest and most ambitious London destination.

Working alongside architects Foster + Partners, the American luxury home brand has carefully restored and connected several landmark buildings, while preserving many of their original architectural details.

Grand staircases, soaring ceilings, ornate mouldings and beautifully restored stonework now provide a dramatic backdrop for RH's signature collection of furniture, lighting, and décor.

Every room feels intentionally curated, allowing visitors to imagine complete living spaces. Neutral palettes, natural stone, oversized chandeliers, and sculptural furnishings reinforce RH's recognisable aesthetic, while the historic architecture adds a distinctly European sense of grandness.

One of the gallery's quieter highlights is its Architecture & Design Library, a space filled with rare books and design references that celebrate centuries of craftsmanship and architectural history.

RH's galleries showcase beautifully curated interiors designed to inspire every room.

THE FOODIE SECRET EVERYONE IS TALKING ABOUT

While design lovers will arrive for the interiors, many Londoners are expected to visit for something else entirely: the restaurants.

Hidden within the gallery are two distinctive dining experiences that have quickly become some of Mayfair's most talked-about new spots.

The Dining Room occupies the building's former banking hall, where guests dine beneath a striking gold-leaf ceiling surrounded by monumental Roman-inspired columns and sparkling Venetian glass chandeliers. Rather than chasing culinary trends, the menu focuses on timeless, elegantly prepared classics accompanied by an extensive wine and Champagne selection.

The Perch is RH's rooftop restaurant, offering garden-inspired dining above the streets of Mayfair.

For something even more memorable, visitors can head upstairs to The Perch, an enchanting rooftop restaurant by celebrated designer Anouska Hempel.

It's a setting that feels worlds away from the bustle of central London.

A wine bar and tea salon complete the hospitality offering, making it entirely possible to spend hours exploring the gallery without ever feeling the need to leave.

The Paloma Collection combines sculptural forms with timeless craftsmanship.

MORE THAN SHOPPING

The London opening represents the brand's most significant European statement yet, following previous openings in England and Paris.

Rather than simply displaying products, the gallery invites guests to experience an aspirational way of living where beautifully designed spaces naturally extend into equally considered places to eat, relax, and gather.
