Milan Design Week is in full swing in the northern Italian city, attracting artists, architects, designers, and the most stylish to the annual celebration of interior design. Margot Robbie dropped by to peruse one of Milan's buzziest new cultural openings, and made sure to dress the part.

The Wuthering Heights actor attended luxury home brand RH's opening of the grand Gallery on Corso Venezia, a 19th century palazzo transformed into a multi-level retail, architecture, and hospitality destination within the city's historic fashion district. For the occasion, Robbie left modern-Brontë method dressing garb at home in favor of some sciura style (For the uninitiated—and those without this excellent Instagram on your Explore page—the Sciura is a Milanese woman who dresses elegantly and impeccably. Think: leopard prints and Sophia Loren sunglasses, a suite of gemstone jewelry, fabulous tailored suits.)
