Between them, Margot Robbie and Zoe Saldaña have conquered the box office. One's a Marvel hero and an Avatar, and the other is a DC bad girl and Barbie herself. You'd think it would be some Hollywood super-producer with a bottomless checkbook that brought them together for a blockbuster—but the pair actually crossed paths last night during Design Week in Milan, of all places. Attending RH Milan's launch event for its soaring Gallery on Corso Venezia flagship, the pair took too contrasting paths to dressing.

While Saldana's attire veered the decoratively feminine route, Robbie's nodded to the city's rich suiting industry and menswear culture. Both looks were fitting for the occasion during Design Week, which celebrates the latest lifestyle, home, and interior design collection and advancements from numerous brands.

Robbie and Saldana's Milan moment also marks the latest appearance by both stars, notably following Robbie's romance-inspired press tour for Emerald Fennell's Wuthering Heights. Hopefully it's only the beginning of their red carpet rounds this summer.
