The Restoration

"I wanted to create a space that people can dream in," says Restoration Hardware Chairman and Co-CEO Gary Friedman of the company's new The Gallery at Beverly Boulevard. The monumental, bi-level retail space provides more than enough ways for "Resto" lovers to do just that. Wander the rooms full of the brand's ever-evolving collection; smell the posies in floral designer Eddie Zaratsian's boutique; order an organic oolong from the Bellocq tea atelier, pick up interiors magazines from the bibliotheque and read in the garden beneath 65-year-old olive trees. It's only one of two new ventures from the design house; Restoration Hardware has also opened doors in Marin to The Baby & Child Gallery. "We're just warming up," Friedman says of the firm's expansion. "You'll see us moving faster. We're kind of allergic to the status quo." The Gallery at Beverly Blvd., 8772 Beverly Blvd., WeHo, 310-652-0323; The Baby & Child Gallery, 1816 Redwood Hwy., Corte Madera, 415-927-2659; restorationhardware.com.

Wall Art

This month, Farrow & Ball introduces its new wallcoverings collection, The Broccato Papers, based on brocade designs found in Renaissance paintings on display at London's National Gallery. The six patterns—in both birds and botanicals—come in 10 colors, including metallics. 8475 Melrose Ave., L.A., 323-655-4499; farrow-ball.com.

Give it to Me Straight

For his chic new collaboration with Swedish crystal company Orrefors, Karl Lagerfeld has created glassware in (what else?) black and white. The pieces—champagne coupes and flutes; wine, water and liqueur glasses; and coasters—are as straightforward and streamlined as the designer himself. orrefors.com.

Wine glass, $250, and champagne flute, $150.
